Long ago, when Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) lived, there was a very smart and careful companion of the Prophet. His name was Hudzaifah bin Al-Yaman. Everyone knew him as an honest person.

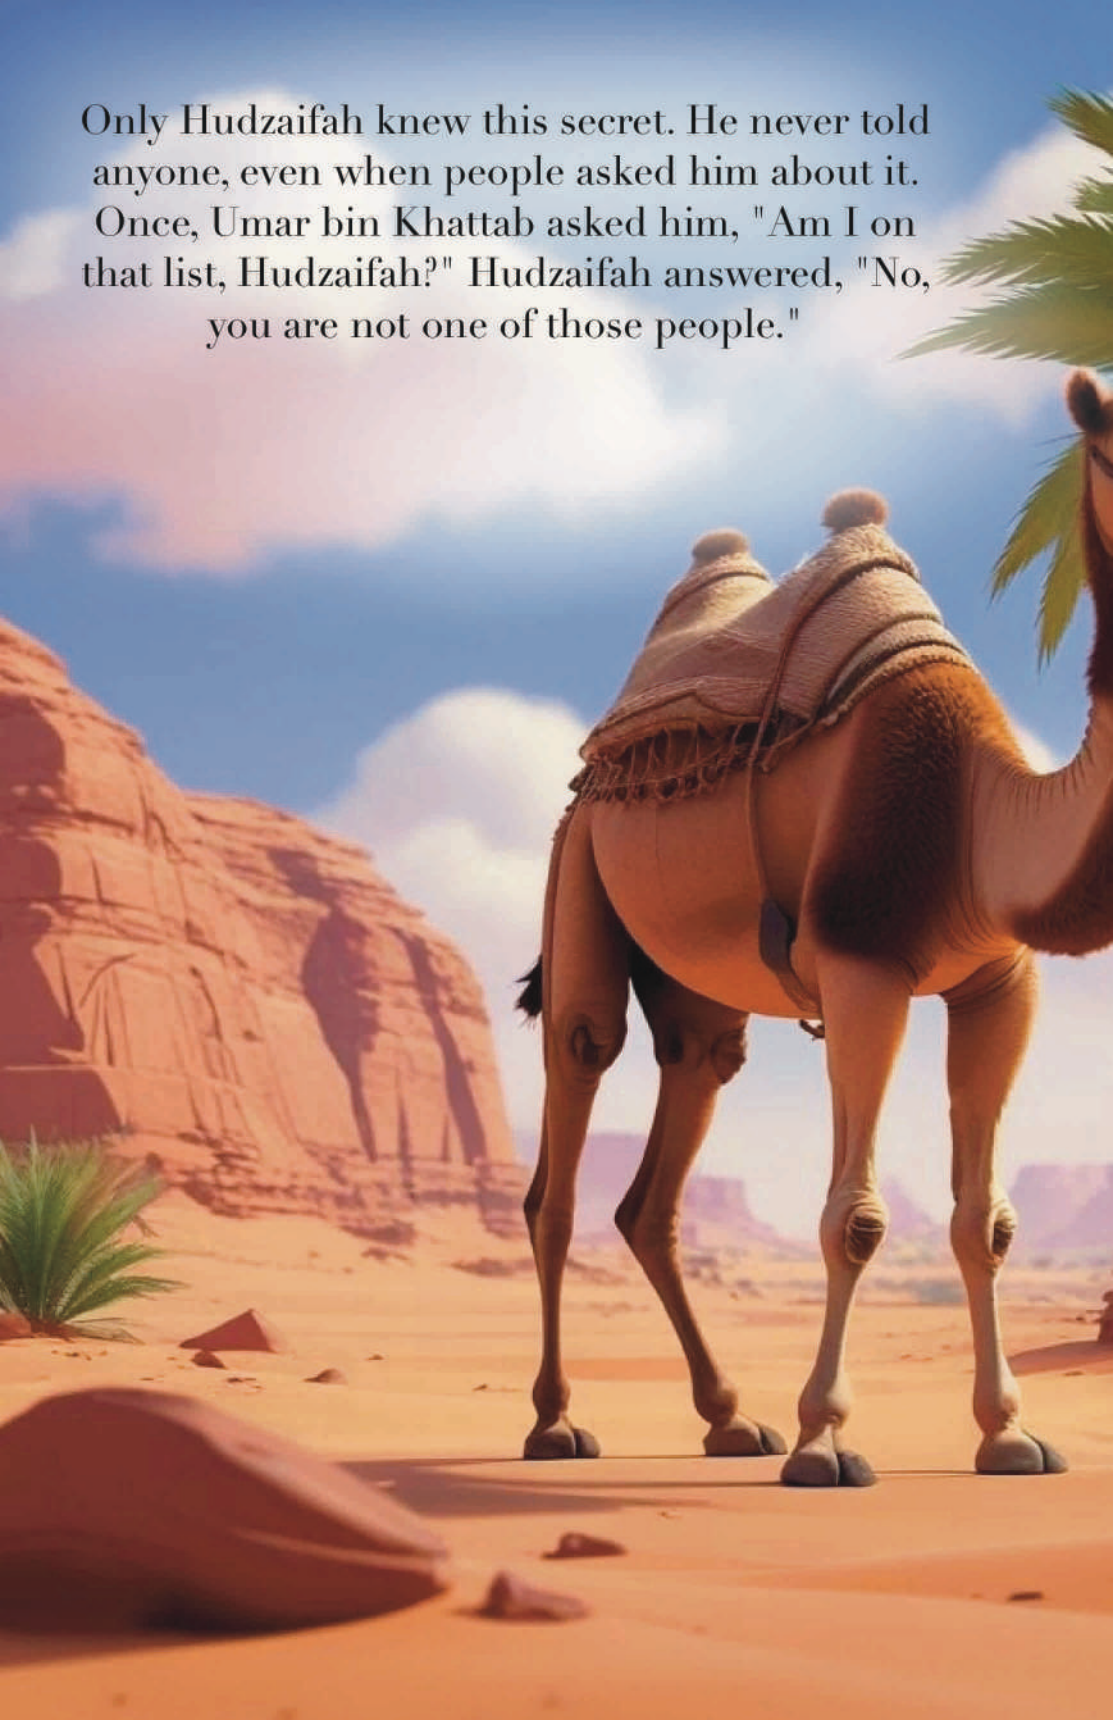

One day, Prophet Muhammad called Hudzaifah for a special meeting. The Prophet gave him a very important job - to keep a secret list of names. These were the names of people in Madinah who pretended to believe in Allah but were actually enemies.

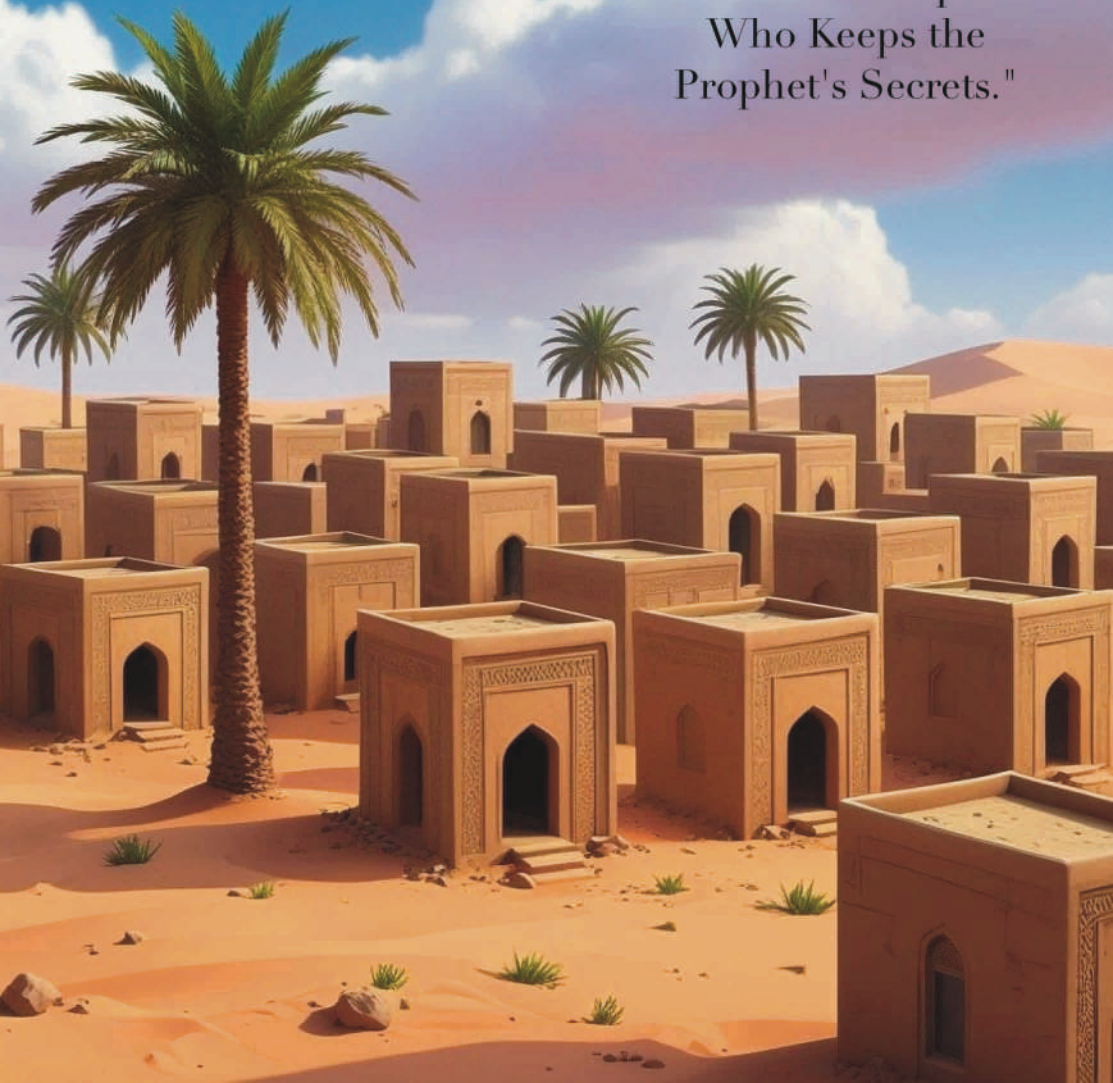

Only Hudzaifah knew this secret. He never told anyone, even when people asked him about it. Once, Umar bin Khattab asked him, "Am I on that list, Hudzaifah?" Hudzaifah answered, "No, you are not one of those people."

Because Hudzaifah was so good at keeping the Prophet's secret, people
gave him a special
name: "The Companion
Who Keeps the Prophet's Secrets."

Dear good children, keeping a trust means keeping promises. If someone gives you a task, makes you promise something, or tells you a secret, don't forget it or tell others! Children who can be trusted are loved by Allah and looked up to by their friends. Let's learn from the Prophet's friend Hudzaifah bin Al-Yaman, who kept his promise even when no one was watching.

Remember, Allah always knows who tells the truth and who breaks promises. So let's be honest and trustworthy wherever we are!

The Importance of Being Honest for Muslim Children
Being honest is one of the best qualities that Allah and the Prophet love. Honest children always tell the truth, don't like to lie, and are brave enough to admit when they make mistakes. People who are honest feel peaceful inside, are liked by many people, and are trusted by their teachers, parents, and friends.

The Prophet said:

"Being honest leads to doing good things, and doing good things leads to Heaven."

(From the books of Bukhari and Muslim)

By being honest, children will grow up to be brave, responsible people who are loved by Allah.
